Arkansas Valley Interurban railway cars for the first ten months of 1920 made a daily mileage of 2200 miles and carried a daily average of 2431 passengers. The average fare was 55 cents, which was eight cents more than in 1919. Passengers for first ten months of 1920 were 729,431 compared with 768,377 in 1919. Income was thus practically the same for the two years, but expenses in 1920 were greater, making the profits less according to George Theis, Jr., president.

Tuesday, January 18, 1921

All offices of the Arkansas Valley Interurban Railway except that of George Theis, Jr., president, have been moved into the new station at Waco and Douglas, reports Charles R. Lewis, superintendent. The moving started Saturday and was completed Monday.

2. Arkansas Valley Interurban’s new $140,000 passenger station on West Douglas avenue will be open for business Monday. The formal opening will be held February 15. Details. ¶ Woodwork of the building is quarter-sawn oak throughout, except for George Theis Jr.’s office on the second floor, which is finished in mahogany. All offices of the road are on the second floor. ¶ Until the new hotel is built at Waco and Douglas, the station has a large sign painted on its east wall which can easily be read from Main and Douglas.

4. Article about improvements completed in past year or two on Elba Island, or “island it was when an arm of the shifting Arkansas once wended its way to the west of that which now is the main stream.” ¶ What was once masses of cottonwood and jungle, fit only for the haunts of hiding criminals or the lair of small animals, now is a field of fertile soil made partly from thousands of loads of refuse deposited while it was a common dumping ground. It is now the municipal farm. ¶ In 1910, soon after the plat was acquired by purchase, Wichita voted $10,000 in bonds with which to erect a jail and home for the prisoners. However the money was not used until 1917, when the first effort was made to make it habitable by clearing the trees and brush away. Then the prisoners made cement blocks and constructed a jail building at cost of $5083. Later the detention hospital for communicable disease patients was built, also by prison labor. This building is on the river bank, probably 500 feet from the jail and will accommodate 20 patients. ¶ Photographs of the jail and detention hospital.

5. George Siedhoff’s new hotel planned at Douglas and Waco is to be five stories and front 120 feet on both Douglas and Waco. To cost around $600,000. A corridor will be built connecting the new hotel with the new Arkansas Valley Interurban station. A large unfinished entrance to the new station has been left on the east side to be connected with the hotel.
