Biography

Charles Plymell was born in Holcomb, Kansas on April 26, 1935. His family later moved to Wichita and Plymell was sent to a military academy in San Antonio, Texas. In 1955 Plymell enrolled at Wichita State University in Wichita, Kansas, where he attended classes and worked as a printer until 1960, without ever obtaining a degree.

It was during this time that Plymell began to develop a name for himself in the literary world. While a student at Wichita State, Plymell edited and published Poets' Corner and Mikrokosmos, two popular campus literary magazines. By 1963 he was living in San Francisco and had published at least five other literary journals, including the first issue of underground comic Zap Comix, with artwork by Robert Crumb. In 1967 Plymell published his first book Apocalypse Rose which was admired by Lawrence Ferlinghetti and Allen Ginsberg, allowing Plymell to be adopted by the Beat Generation.

Johns Hopkins University awarded Plymell a fellowship in 1970 and he and his wife Pamela moved to Maryland where soon after he began to work on The Last of the Moccasins. This novel tells the story of Plymell's interaction with Beat icons Allen Ginsberg and Neal Cassady as well as describes the underbelly of the Wichita counterculture scene. Lawrence Ferlinghetti's City Lights Books published the novel in 1971. After receiving his MA from Johns Hopkins in 1970 Plymell and his wife moved to New York and started Cherry Valley Editions, publishing the likes of Allen Ginsberg, William S. Burroughs, and Janine Pommey Vega.

Charles Plymell has written over ten books and appeared in countless zines, journals and anthologies. He is still actively writing and his anthology Hand on the Doorknob: A Charles Plymell Reader was published in late May 2000.
