Collection Summary

Title: Dwane and Velma Wallace Collection

Call Number: MS 2015-01

Creators: Dwane and Velma Wallace

Inclusive Dates: 1908-2014

Size: Approx. 42.5 linear feet (37 boxes and 1 OS folder)

Abstract: The collection consists of material documenting the Cessna Aircraft Company as well as the careers and civic activities of long-time company president Dwane Wallace and his wife Velma Lunt Wallace. Items in the collection include administrative records, business and personal correspondence, financial information, technical reports, corporate publications, news clippings, scrapbooks, photographs, speeches, awards, oral history transcriptions, biographical and personal records, audiovisual material, and artifacts and memorabilia. The collection spans the years 1908 to 2014, with the bulk covering the years 1934 to 1981.

Content Note

The collection consists of records documenting the business activities of the Cessna Aircraft Company and papers documenting the professional and public lives of Dwane and Velma Wallace. Inclusive dates span the years 1908 to 2014, with the bulk dates from 1934 to 1981. The records provide a history of both Cessna and the general aviation industry in Wichita and document Dwane Wallace's career with the company.

The majority of material was collected by Dwane Wallace during his time with Cessna and includes incorporation documents and meeting minutes; business correspondence; annual reports to shareholders, contracts, stock reports, and financial news releases; blueprints, drawings, a project memorandum, and technical reports; aircraft certificates and radio licenses; corporate publications such as employee yearbooks, newsletters, magazines, company and airplane brochures, instruction and operating manuals for various aircraft, parts catalogs, and advertisements; news clippings about Cessna and the Wallaces; scrapbooks and photographs; administrative records, correspondence, and photographs relating to the Wallace Endowment Fund; periodicals owned by the Wallaces; speeches; awards, certificates, and plaques; oral histories; personal correspondence; biographical and personal records; audiovisual material; and company artifacts and personal memorabilia.

This collection is noteworthy for its World War II-era material documenting Cessna's prominent role in producing trainer jets for the Canadian and U.S. militaries, the public recognition Dwane received for contributions to the aviation industry, and the philanthropy he and Velma engaged in to benefit Wichita.

Administrative History

A pioneering aviator and airplane manufacturer based in Wichita during the 1910s and 1920s, Clyde Cessna (1879-1954) and fellow aviation aficionado Victor Roos (1880-1964) formally incorporated the Cessna-Roos Aircraft Company on September 7, 1927. Shortly thereafter, some members of the Board of Directors wanted to change the name of the business to the Cessna Aircraft Company; Roos opposed this motion and eventually sold his interest in the enterprise. On December 22, 1927 the business was reincorporated as the Cessna Aircraft Company.

Throughout 1928 and into 1929, Clyde had considerable success in promoting and selling monoplanes and his son Eldon worked as an engineer for the company. With the advent of the 1930s and the Great Depression, Clyde eventually lost control within the Board of Directors and relinquished his long-held seat as President. On March 6, 1931, the new President, along with other Board members, succeeded in closing the factory doors to minimize further financial losses.

Late in 1933, Clyde's nephews, Dwane Wallace (1911-1989) and his brother Dwight (1909-1964) sought to aid their uncle in reinvigorating the company's fortunes. The duo convinced him to write letters to Cessna stockholders, urging them to side with Clyde by reappointing him as president at the annual stockholders' meeting. When the meeting occurred on January 18, 1934 and it was time for the appointment of new officers, Clyde held the majority of stockholder proxies and was able to regain his position and call for the reopening of the company. Dwane, who had graduated from the University of Wichita the previous May as a student in aeronautical engineering, became the general manager of the plant, working with other engineers to develop a new aircraft design he had formulated in college. Dwight, an ambitious young attorney, became the company's secretary and treasurer.

The following years saw the production of the company's first model, the C-34, a plane which innovated upon the Cessna aircraft of the late 1920s; this model and the others which followed it became known as the "Airmaster." Shortly after production began on the C-34, Eldon left Cessna to join what was then the Northrop Division at Douglas Aircraft. Since business was very modest during the mid-1930s, Clyde, Dwane, and Dwight worked without salaries, with Dwane entering and winning air races for cash prizes that could supply the company payroll. In October 1936, Clyde resigned his position as president of Cessna, selling his majority stock in the company to his nephews and effectively giving them total control. Dwane became president of Cessna while Dwight maintained his duties as secretary and treasurer, eventually becoming Executive Vice-President during World War II.

As the 1930s came to a close, the Airmaster series of planes which had rehabilitated the company was followed by the design and production of a new twin-engine plane, the T-50, which Dwane had envisioned as serving personal, business, and military purposes. With the onset of World War II, the United States and Canada requisitioned Cessna to build hundreds of T-50s for novice pilots to fly. The first Canadian contract, which was formalized in September 1940 and amounted to millions of dollars, was followed by others which made Cessna highly profitable for the first time since its reopening. These contracts also necessitated a large-scale hiring and plant expansion program, bringing thousands of employees into the plants to work around the clock and increasing factory space by tens of thousands of square feet. As the war progressed, Cessna performed military sub-contract work for Boeing and Douglas, producing airplane components for bombers. For its high productivity and efficiency during this era, Cessna earned five Army-Navy "E" Awards.

With the end of World War II, Dwight Wallace resigned from Cessna and returned to his law practice. Dwane, who foresaw the need for affordable civilian aircraft as well as executive planes, began conceiving of models that could meet these varied purposes. The single-engine planes produced during the late 1940s and early 1950s filled these needs admirably. Cessna also profited in producing home furniture, farm machinery, and aircraft for military purposes. As the 1950s progressed and came to a close, Cessna's continued success was evinced by greater factory space, larger employment, higher production volume, and Dwane's receipt of awards for his professional accomplishments.

The 1960s saw similar growth as Cessna offered more models for business and personal use, maintaining most of its subsidiary enterprises while expanding its market into Europe and South America. Toward the end of the decade, Dwane saw the need for an executive business jet that was more efficient and cost-effective than those available at the time. The product of this vision, the Citation, became a reality on September 10, 1971 when it received its type certification from the FAA. Although the design and production of the plane had been costly, Dwane foresaw its appeal if attention was given to customer service. To meet this need, Cessna began opening Citation Service Centers around the country so that company representatives and service technicians could work directly with customers. The expense and effort paid off as 1,000 Citations were sold by 1982, a decade in which the jet proved to be popular and highly profitable, yet cost-effective to manufacture and maintain.

MS 2015-01
Dwane and Velma Wallace Collection Finding Aid

After a long and fulfilling career at Cessna, Dwane retired as Chairman of the Board in 1975, having delegated presidential duties to Del Roskam in 1964 due to the company's continued expansion. The two men acted as senior consultants to the Board of Directors until 1983 when Dwane resigned. He then devoted himself to philanthropic pursuits with his wife Velma (1917-2012), who had begun working for him as his secretary in 1937 until their marriage in 1941.

During Dwane's retirement, the Wallaces strengthened an already substantial tie to Wichita State University by establishing the Dwane and Velma Wallace Endowment Fund in March 1976. This gift provides in perpetuity scholarships for undergraduate and graduate engineering students, monies for classroom equipment, and financial awards for outstanding faculty members. In 1977 WSU honored Dwane by naming the new engineering building Wallace Hall; he was also awarded an honorary doctorate by the university in 1982. During this time, Dwane also received the Daniel Guggenheim Medal and the Wright Brothers Memorial Trophy for his services to the aviation industry. After undergoing heart surgery in June 1989, he died in Wichita on December 21 of that year.

Velma Lunt Wallace maintained an active interest in the Wichita community along with Dwane and was particularly noted for her advocacy of various educational institutions and social causes, namely Exploration Place, the Red Cross, the United Way, the Kansas 4-H Foundation, and the Kansas Society for Crippled Children. For her philanthropic efforts Velma received many awards and commendations, including the President's Medal and the Honorary Alumna Award from Wichita State University, as well as the Wichita Chamber of Commerce's "Uncommon Citizen" Award in 1998. She maintained an active correspondence with Wallace Scholars who had graduated from WSU and gave speeches at the annual Wallace Scholar Breakfasts during the 1990s and 2000s. Velma died at the age of 95 on July 8, 2012. She and Dwane are survived by their four daughters.

Series Descriptions

Series 1: Administrative Records, 1927-1959

Box: 1

MS 2015-01
Dwane and Velma Wallace Collection Finding Aid

This series contains administrative material for the Cessna Aircraft Company, its predecessor, the Cessna-Roos Aircraft Company, and two subsidiary entities. Items include bylaws, articles of incorporation, and meeting minutes of the Board of Directors.

Arrangement Note

This series is arranged into three subseries: (1.1) Cessna Aircraft Company, (1.2) National Aero-Finance Company, and (1.3) Cessna Foundation. Records are in chronological order.

Subseries 1.1: Cessna Aircraft Company, 1927-1959

Box: 1

This subseries contains administrative records of the Cessna-Roos Aircraft Company, which existed from September to December 1927, and those of the Cessna Aircraft Company, incorporated on December 22 of that year. Minutes often have resolutions, correspondence, and Oaths of Directors attached.

Subseries 1.2: National Aero-Finance Company, 1955-1956

Box: 1

This subseries contains administrative records of the National Aero-Finance Company, a subsidiary financing corporation founded and owned by Cessna.

Subseries 1.3: Cessna Foundation, 1952-1956

Box: 1

This subseries contains bylaws, the articles of incorporation, and meeting minutes for the Board of Trustees and the Executive Committee of the Cessna Foundation.

Series 2: Business Correspondence, 1928-1964

Box: 1

This series contains correspondence in the form of letters and telegrams concerning the Cessna Aircraft Company. Notable early items include copies of Clyde Cessna's letters from late 1933 urging stockholders to vote in his favor at the annual meeting, and a 1938 letter from Cessna to its stockholders informing them of the new twin-engine model in development. Another item of interest is a telegram from Dwane to Dwight Wallace in December 1936 telling of Dwane's success in winning the Argentine Trophy Race at the Miami All-American Air Race, an event after which Cessna was declared "The World's Most Efficient Airplane."

Noteworthy items from the 1940s include a letter to shareholders informing them of the company's lucrative contracts to build T-50 planes, as well as an extended correspondence between Cessna and the United States Air Force in late 1948 and early 1949 regarding the former's effort to supply a rescue aircraft for the latter's mission to recover stranded aviators in Greenland.

Arrangement Note: This series is ordered chronologically with the Greenland Rescue Mission material having its own folder.

Dwane and Velma Wallace Collection Finding Aid

Series 3: Business Meetings, Reports, Contracts, and News Releases, 1927-1985

Boxes: 1-3, 15

This series is composed of stockholders' meeting minutes, annual reports, contracts, records of financial transactions, correspondence on Cessna's entry into the New York Stock Exchange, financial news releases, and assorted other documents.

Arrangement Note

This series is divided into the following subseries: (3.1) Stockholders' Meeting Minutes, (3.2) Annual Reports, (3.3) Contracts, (3.4) Records of Financial Transactions, (3.5) Correspondence on Cessna's Entry into the NYSE, (3.6) News Releases, and (3.7) Other. Material is arranged chronologically.

Subseries 3.1: Stockholders' Meeting Minutes, 1927-1959

Box: 1-2

This subseries consists of minutes for annual and special meetings of Cessna stockholders. The first two sets of minutes in September and December 1927 were created during the lifetime of the Cessna-Roos Aircraft Company; following the dissolution of that entity, all remaining minutes and attached records pertain to the Cessna Aircraft Company. Attachments to meeting minutes include notices for annual and special meetings, stockholder proxies, Oaths of Directors, and stockholder share reports.

Subseries 3.2: Annual Reports, 1938-1985

Boxes: 2-3

This subseries contains Cessna's Annual Reports to stockholders regarding the financial condition of the company. Most have Mid-Year or Quarterly Shareholder Reports, as well as a notice regarding the annual meeting of stockholders. Other items such as Proxy Statements with accompanying envelopes, meeting agendas, correspondence, brochures, and related financial data such as audits are also included. Annual Reports from 1939 through 1984 comprise this series, along with correspondence and Shareholder Reports from 1985.

It is unknown if Cessna published an annual report for 1938. A letter from Dwane Wallace to stockholders concerning the company's condition for this year, an attached notice of the 1939 annual meeting of stockholders, and a balance sheet reflecting Cessna's finances for 1938 basically represent what would have constituted an annual report for this year.

Subseries 3.3: Contracts, 1930-1942

Boxes: 3, 15

This subseries contains records for four separate contracts. Three of the four reflect negotiations between Cessna and the Royal Canadian Air Force in the years 1940 and 1941 regarding the production and purchase of T-50 airplanes. Material includes copies of three checks to Cessna for the first RCAF contract, the original terms of the first two contracts, as well as attached correspondence, amendments, appendices, price lists, quantity recommendation lists, and handwritten notes.

RESEARCHER NOTES:

- See Subseries 3.1 for correspondence between Cessna and its stockholders regarding design and production of the T-50.

MS 2015-01

- See Series 9: Images for photographs of T-50 airplanes and related award ceremonies concerning Cessna's production of the planes for Canada.
- See Subseries 15.4: Flying Bobcats for newsletters providing further historical and product information about the T-50.

Subseries 3.4: Records of Financial Transactions, 1935-1941

Box: 3

This subseries mainly consists of records reflecting Dwane and Dwight Wallace's buyout of stock held by Clyde Cessna before and after his resignation from Cessna on October 20, 1936. Also present are a promissory note from C.V. Cessna and Dwight Wallace payable to Dwane Wallace, and two receipts from 1941 for the transfer of Cessna stock.

Subseries 3.5: Correspondence on Cessna's Entry into the NYSE, 1956

Box: 3

This subseries contains correspondence, memoranda, and news clippings about the trading of Cessna's stock on the New York Stock Exchange.

Subseries 3.6: News Releases, 1961-1985

Box: 3

This subseries largely houses news releases from Cessna regarding financial matters. There are gaps in coverage between mid-1969 and 1973, as well as the years after 1982, with the exception of one release from 1985.

Subseries 3.7: Other, 1937-1941

Box: 3

This subseries consists of prospectuses for Cessna stock, a sales report, a loan application, a special discount and bonus schedule for Airmaster sales, an audit report, and an appointment of transfer agent and registrar for Cessna stock.

Series 4: Blueprints, Drawings, Memoranda, and Technical Reports, 1934-1981

Boxes: 3-4

This series contains blueprints and drawings, stress analyses, assembly instructions, test reports, and other documents about Cessna Airmaster models, particularly the C-34. Also included are memoranda, reports, and architectural drawings for the Wallace Plant.

Arrangement Note

This series is arranged into four subseries: (4.1) C-34 and C-37, (4.2) Memoranda, (4.3) Reports, and (4.4) Drawings for the Proposed New Cessna Plant.

Subseries 4.1: C-34 and C-37: 1934-1946

Box: 3

This subseries contains records largely pertaining to the C-34, although documents for the C-37 and other Airmaster models are present. Items include a blueprint list with accompanying blueprints and drawings for the C-34 and stress analyses for the C-34 and C-37. There are also reports submitted by

MS 2015-01
Dwane and Velma Wallace Collection Finding Aid

Cessna to the Department of Commerce concerning component performance and test results for the C-34; a list enumerating the reports is provided, but not all are present. Reports submitted to the Department of Commerce are arranged numerically according to the list, as are the blueprints for the C-34; most of the other material is arranged by subject.

Subseries 4.2: Memoranda, 1935-c.1954

Box: 3-4

This subseries contains two memoranda: the first, which is excerpted, contains data on a rotary spoiler used on an experimental Cessna aircraft; the second pertains to Cessna's unsuccessful effort to produce and market its first executive transport airplane, the Model 620, during the mid-1950s. Records are arranged chronologically.

Subseries 4.3: Reports, 1938-1981

Boxes: 4

This subseries consists of various reports concerning Cessna aircraft, components, and the organization itself. Reports are arranged chronologically.

Subseries 4.4: Drawings for the Proposed New Cessna Plant, c. 1956

Box: 4

This subseries is comprised of a binder of architectural drawings and artist's projections of the Wallace Plant. Material is undated, but is from the mid-1950s (the plant was completed in the early 1960s).

Series 5: Federal Licenses and Certifications, 1941-1947

Box: 4

This series contains federal registration and airworthiness certificates and four aircraft radio station licenses, all pertaining to the Cessna C-165, No. 32450, which was flown frequently by Dwane Wallace in the 1940s and later restored by him in the 1980s.

Arrangement Note

This series is arranged chronologically.

Series 6: Cessna Publications and Other Manufacturers' Publications, 1913-2007

Boxes: 4-6, 15, 37

This series contains material published by Cessna and various manufacturers.

Arrangement Note

This series is divided into ten subseries: (6.1) Yearbooks, (6.2) Newsletters, (6.3) Magazines, (6.4) Brochures, (6.5) An Eye to the Sky, (6.6) Operation and Information Manuals, (6.7) Parts Catalogs and Price Lists, (6.8) Employees' Guide, (6.9) Advertisements and Promotional Material, and (6.10) Other Manufacturers' Publications.

Subseries 6.1: Yearbooks, 1941-42

MS 2015-01
Dwane and Velma Wallace Collection Finding Aid

Box: 4, 37

This subseries contains the Aircrafter employee yearbooks for 1941 and 1942. These items offer a valuable glimpse into Cessna's support of the war effort through the production of T-50s for Canada and the United States, including the honoring of Cessna with its first Army-Navy "E" Award in 1942. Also of note are photos of company executives, various work divisions, and employees at work and leisure.

RESEARCHER NOTES:

- See Subseries 7.1: Scrapbooks and 7.2: Clippings for newspaper articles on Cessna activities and personnel during World War II.
- See Series 9: Images for more photographs of Cessna during World War II, including copies of photos used in creating Aircrafter layouts.
- See Subseries 15.4: Flying Bobcats for further information about Cessna's production of the T-50.

Subseries 6.2: Newsletters, 1966-1986

Box: 4-5

This subseries contains four newsletters relating to Cessna employees and distributors. Some numbers of "Marketing News" and "Skyword" lack pages and are incomplete. Arrangement is alphabetical and then by date.

Subseries 6.3: Magazines, c.1952-2007

Box: 5

This subseries contains numbers of three magazines published by Cessna for its employees and the aviation community. Of particular note are the issues of Cessquire, which featured news in the plants, visits by officials and well-known persons, reports on new planes, information about Cessna's sports teams, employee birthdays and employment anniversaries, company parties and celebrations, and occasional columns written by Dwane Wallace. Material is arranged alphabetically by title and then by date.

Subseries 6.4: Brochures, c.1930-1982

Box: 5, 15

This subseries is composed of brochures for Cessna furniture, airplanes, and avionics. The bulk is centered on 1976 aircraft models. Arrangement is chronological and then alphabetical; furniture items follow aviation and avionics brochures.

RESEARCHER NOTE: See Series 9 for photographs of many plane models contained in this subseries.

Subseries 6.5: An Eye to the Sky, 1962

Box: 5

This subseries consists of the booklet, "An Eye to the Sky," which provides a history of Cessna from 1911-1961.

Subseries 6.6: Operation and Information Manuals, c.1948-1986

MS 2015-01
Dwane and Velma Wallace Collection Finding Aid

Box: 5-6

This subseries consists of manuals about various Cessna aircraft; they provide specifications, operating and maintenance instructions, emergency procedures, and other information. Most items pertain to models produced after Dwane Wallace's retirement from the company. Material is arranged chronologically.

Subseries 6.7: Parts Catalogs and Price Lists, 1938-1954

Box: 6

This subseries is made up of parts catalogs and price lists for the Cessna models C-38, 190, and 195. Material is arranged by model series.

Subseries 6.8: Employees' Guide, 1955

Box: 6

This subseries contains "Know the Ropes," a guide for new Cessna employees which outlines company policies, workplace regulations, professional development, employee benefits, and also contains a brief company history.

Subseries 6.9: Advertisements and Promotional Material, 1913-1975

Box: 6

This subseries consists of advertisements and promotional material relating to Clyde Cessna's exhibition flights, Cessna airplanes, World War II sub-contract work, Cessna sports teams, company operations, annual exhibitions, financing programs, and the company's 65th anniversary. Material is arranged chronologically.

Subseries 6.10: Other Manufacturers' Publications, 1935-1941

Box: 6

This subseries contains various manufacturers' service instructions, parts lists, catalogs; and handbooks pertaining to aircraft engines, starters, battery ignitions, and generators which were used in Cessna aircraft. Material is arranged alphabetically.

Series 7: News Clippings and Publications about Cessna, Dwane Wallace, and Velma Wallace, 1917-2010

Boxes: 7-12, OS

This series mainly consists of clippings from newspapers and periodicals about the Cessna Aircraft Company, and the professional and personal achievements of Dwane Wallace. Prominent subject matter includes the evolution of general aviation in Wichita, the company's sports teams, Cessna's production of T-50's for Canada and the United States during World War II, its prominence in general aviation from the 1950s through the 1980s, as well as product liability issues and other challenges affecting the aviation community during the 1980s. Ads and publicity for and by Cessna are also present, particularly in the scrapbooks. There are articles on the philanthropic work of both Dwane and Velma Wallace within Wichita.

The series also contains binders on Cessna aircraft and records pertaining to the C-190/195 airplane models.

MS 2015-01
Dwane and Velma Wallace Collection Finding Aid

Arrangement Note

This series is arranged into four subseries: (7.1) Scrapbooks, (7.2) Clippings, (7.3) Mort Brown Publications, and (7.4) C-190/195. All material is arranged chronologically with the exception of the last subseries, which is by title.

Subseries 7.1: Scrapbooks, 1934-1983

Boxes: 7-10

This subseries consists of scrapbooks of newspaper clippings from 1934 through the mid-1980s. Periodicals, ephemera, and Cessna publications are included. Material is arranged chronologically. Since some scrapbooks are not labeled with a date range, coverage by year or era is used to order those items.

Note: There is redundancy in coverage within this subseries and with respect to Subseries 7.2: Clippings.

Subseries 7.2: Clippings, 1917-2011

Box: 11, OS

Loose clippings from newspapers and periodicals are kept in this subseries, along with occasional newsletters and calendars featuring Cessna products or representatives. Material is arranged chronologically; there is a separate folder for articles on Eldon Cessna's life, career, and death.

Subseries 7.3: Mort Brown Publications, 2004-2010

Box: 11-12

This subseries contains binders on Cessna aircraft models created by long-time Cessna test pilot Mort Brown. One item, a catalog of Cessna planes, cannot be verified as having been created by Brown but is retained within the subseries. Material is arranged alphabetically.

Subseries 7.4: C-190/195, 1971, undated

Box: 12

This subseries is comprised of material relating to the C-190/195 airplane models. Documents include airworthiness directives and aircraft specifications issued by the National Aeronautics Association, as well as a series listing of each C-190/195 production number and an incomplete Continental Engine service bulletin. Material is arranged alphabetically; when a document does not have a title, one has been created for it.

Series 8: Scrapbooks and Albums, 1953-2006

Box: 13

This series contains photograph albums, scrapbooks, and guest books commemorating Clyde Cessna, Dwane and Velma Wallace, the dedication of Wallace Hall, and Cessna. Two photo scrapbooks are based around business: the first documents the opening of Wichita's Citation Service Center in February of 1971; the other records the FAA certification for the Citation on September 10th later that year.

Arrangement note

This series is arranged chronologically.

RESEARCHER NOTES

- For additional photographs of the Citation with respect to its first test flight in 1969 and eventual FAA certification, see Series 9: Images.
- To read Dwane Wallace's speech and other material commemorating the dedication of Wallace Hall, see Subseries 11.1: Dwane Wallace.

Series 9: Images, 1908-2005

Box: 14-16, 26, 28, 31, 34

This series contains photographs of early aviators such as Orville Wright, models of Cessna aircraft from various decades, air races during the 1920s, Dwane Wallace's time as a student at the University of Wichita, production of the T-50 during World War II and the accompanying plant expansion, Cessna's receiving the Army-Navy "E" Award, images used in layouts for the Aircrafter yearbooks, employee anniversaries, various award ceremonies honoring Dwane, and the Wallaces meeting President Ronald Reagan. Occasionally, negatives and slides are present and are kept with their positive image when possible.

Arrangement Note: There are no subseries. Material is arranged chronologically; many items have annotations on the back referring to dates, persons, and events.

RESEARCHER NOTES: To read speeches corresponding to the award ceremonies represented in this series, see Subseries 11.1: Dwane Wallace.

Series 10: Wallace Endowment Fund, 1976-2012

Boxes: 16-18

This series contains material pertaining to the Dwane and Velma Wallace Endowment Fund, which was established in 1976 at Wichita State University for the benefit of the College of Engineering.

Arrangement Note

This series is made up of six subseries: (10.1) Annual Meeting Minutes of Wallace Endowment Fund Advisors, (10.2) Wallace Endowment Fund Correspondence, (10.3) Annual Reports of the Wallace Scholars Program, (10.4) Wallace Scholars Events, (10.5) Wallace Scholars' Correspondence, and (10.6) Images. Material is arranged chronologically.

Subseries 10.1: Annual Meeting Minutes of Wallace Endowment Fund Advisors, 1978-1995

Box: 16

This subseries consists of minutes pertaining to the annual meetings of the Wallace Endowment Fund Advisors; attached correspondence, meeting agendas, and notes by Velma or others are included.

Subseries 10.2: Wallace Endowment Fund Correspondence, 1976-1993

MS 2015-01
Dwane and Velma Wallace Collection Finding Aid

Box: 16

This subseries contains correspondence concerning the establishment of the Wallace Endowment Fund in 1976, as well as records regarding additional funding given to WSU by the Wallaces in the 1980s and early 1990s.

Subseries 10.3: Annual Reports of the Wallace Scholars Program, 1990-2011

Boxes: 16-17

This subseries consists of the annual reports produced by the College of Engineering concerning the Wallace Scholars Program. These documents provide information on the annual invitational events open to graduating high school students, the retention and graduation rates of Wallace Scholars, student rosters, and the program's social events. There are no Annual Reports for the academic years 1993-94 and 1995-96.

RESEARCHER NOTE: Annual Reports for 2001 and thereafter include images of students; see Subseries 10.6 for pictures of Wallace Scholars between 1991 and 2001.

Subseries 10.4: Wallace Scholars Events, 1982-2012

Box: 17

This subseries contains programs, speeches by Velma Wallace and others, guest lists, student rosters, correspondence, and images and video footage relating to Wallace Scholars Breakfasts and other functions.

Subseries 10.5: Wallace Scholars' Correspondence, 1983-2012

Box: 17

Series 14: Personal Library, 1929-2009

Boxes: 20, 23-24

This series consists of the Wallaces' personal library, comprised of periodicals and pamphlets. Most titles are concerned with Cessna and aviation.

Arrangement Note

Periodicals and pamphlets in this series are arranged alphabetically. Books owned by the Wallaces can be searched using the online catalog.

Series 15: Personal Correspondence, 1937-2012

Box: 24

This series contains personal correspondence written to Dwane and Velma Wallace. Some letters have attached historical items on Cessna during its early years.

Arrangement Note

This series contains two subseries: (15.1) Dwane and Velma Wallace and (15.2) Flying Bobcats. Material is arranged chronologically.

Subseries 15.1: Dwane and Velma Wallace, 1937-2008

Box: 24

This subseries contains personal correspondence to Dwane Wallace and Velma Wallace; most is addressed to Dwane. One folder houses congratulatory letters and cards on his retirement from Cessna.

Subseries 15.2: Flying Bobcats, 1989-2012

Box: 24

This subseries collects newsletters and correspondence to Velma from Jon Larson, founder of the Flying Bobcats aviation club. This organization is devoted to preserving the historical significance of the T-50 "Bobcat," particularly its role during World War II. There are occasional replies from Velma, although most of the newsletters and reproduced Cessna publications focus on the T-50 and the company's wartime importance. Also included in the subseries are pages from the Flying Bobcats website.

Series 16: Biographical Information and Personal Records, 1929-c. 2012

Box: 24
